I

THE GENERAL CEMETERY.

This Cemetery, situated near Magnolia Cemetery, at Charleston, S. C., has been in use since 1856. The inscriptions on its tombstones will furnish the best guide to the various strata of Russian and Polish immigration of the Jewish element in the population of Charleston, S. C., which to-day numerically far outnumbers the remnants of the older elements.

THE DE LEON CEMETERY.

This cemetery, which adjoins the cemetery now in use in Columbia, is known as the De Leon Cemetery. I have neither been able to trace its title nor to ascertain its present owners. It was popularly known in the early days as "die geschmadte Beth Haim"—the cemetery where converts to Christianity were buried,—due to the fact that members of Elias Marks's family had been buried there. It has long been disused and the inscriptions on the tombstones have been copied under the greatest difficulties. It is worthy of note that the Will of Jacob De Leon, its supposed original owner, made July 8, 1828, and recorded in the Columbia Probate Records, Vol. H. pp. 289-290, makes no mention of it.

DE LEON, ADELAIDE, daughter of Jacob and Hannah De Leon, B. Charleston, S. C., Sept. 25, 1805; D. Camden, April 24, 1839.

BAUM, EVA, wife of Herman Baum, B. Neumark, Germany, Dec. 21, 1846; D. Dec. 10, 1907.

BAUM, HERMAN, B. Schwersenz, Germany, 1828; D. Camden, April 11, 1899.

BAUM, MARCUS, "This Shaft is erected to Commemorate the Life and Death of Marcus Baum, Born in Schwersenz, Prussia, on the 7th Day of March 1833.

The sterling qualities of his nature were illustrated by his brief career, to which a glorious Death in defence of his adopted Country formed a fitting close.

In the Battle of the Wilderness on the 6th May 1864 he fell at the side of his beloved Chief, Gen. J. B. Kershaw, a martyr to the "Lost Cause."

His bones now mingle with the dust upon that field of Honor, but his memory is enshrined in the hearts of those who esteem it a privilege to erect this Humble memento."

BLOCK, ROSA HIRSCH, wife of Louis L. Block, B. Jan. 6, 1862; D. March 6, 1902.
